Our Ideal

*True quality is never attained by chance.
 It can only be realized through determined planning and uncompromising devotion to high principles.*

*Many alternatives must be discarded for not being good enough.
 Nothing can be taken for granted.
 The final achievement must represent the highest skills and the collective

In the Huddle

By Steve Snapp

A football team is only as good as its senior class. I was reminded of that this past Sunday by a man who has seen 27 such classes come and go during his illustrious career at Ohio State.

The clock on the wall at the Biggs Athletic facility said 10:00 a.m. Buckeye Coach Woody Hayes, the tireless taskmaster, had already been on the job several hours, studying films of the previous day's 35-0 victory over Illinois.

"You know," he said, taking off his glasses and closing his eyes, "we got another great effort out of our seniors. Chris Ward, Mark Lang and Greg Storer did a fine job of blocking on the line, Jeff Logan played well at fullback and our two flankers, Jim Harrell and Herman Jones, had good days."

Woody had only seen the offensive films, so he had no way of knowing how well the seniors on defense had graded out. Still, he offered, "I bet they did a fine job. They have been great all year long."

"The senior class is the very backbone of a football team and this class has been exceptional," the coach continued. "Our seniors have given us outstanding leadership and fine play in each and every game. When you get that, you generally have a good football team."

I was glad Woody had been studying those films because this year's senior class is making its final home appearance in Ohio Stadium today. His comments could not have come at a more appropriate time. All that remains now is for the Buckeyes to defeat Indiana this afternoon and assure themselves of at least a tie for a record sixth straight Big Ten title. What better way for a senior class to bid adieu to the old Horseshoe?

There was a time when going up against Indiana would not have presented much of a challenge, but that is not the case this year. Coach Lee Corso has his Hoosiers playing good, solid football. They currently own a 4-4-1 record for all games and are 3-2-1

Cagers Play

Ohio State's exciting young basketball team unofficially opens its season tonight by hosting the Athletes in Action, a team of amateur athletes that defeated Nevada-Las Vegas and the University of San Francisco last year enroute to a 54-7 record. Tickets for tonight's game (7:30 in St. John Arena) can be purchased at the Arena Ticket Office, starting at 6:00. Former UCLA center Ralph Drollinger, two time Big Ten scoring leader Mike Robinson and Columbus' own Brad Hoffman are just three of the standouts on the AIA roster.

EXCLUSIVE COMPANY — OSU tailback Ron Springs, shown above as he picks up yardage in last week's game at Illinois, now has 931 yards on the season. With two more games to play during the regular season, the 6-2 junior appears certain to top the 1,000 yard mark and become the sixth OSU runner to exceed that figure in a single season. The others are Jim Otis, John Brockington, Archie Griffin, Pete Johnson and Jeff Logan.

in the Big Ten. Woody unhesitantly calls them "one of the best three or four teams in the conference."

Declares Hayes, "This is the best Indiana team in several years. They can really move the ball, especially on the ground."

Proof of Hayes' statement is found in the latest Big Ten stats which show the Hoosiers third in rushing offense and fourth in total offense. Corso can crow about his defense, too, since IU is third in passing defense and fourth in both total and scoring defense."

Ohio State fans should not lose heart, however. The Buckeyes, who top the Big Ten in rushing offense, total offense and scoring offense and passing and scoring defense, lead the overall series 40-10-4 and have not lost to the Hoosiers since 1951.

The Buckeyes are out in search of No. 41 today against the Hoosiers. They should get it. The seniors will see to that.

Notes . . . The Big Ten's top two rushers are going head-to-head today. IU's Ric Enis leads the league with an average of 122.7 yards per game, while Buckeye tailback Ron Springs is second with a 118.2 average.

Both runners are closing in on the 1,000 yard mark for the season. Enis has 918 yards to his credit and is bidding to become just the fourth man in IU football history to rush for 1,000 or more yards in one season. Springs has 931 and is in position to become OSU's sixth 1,000 yard gainer.

OSU Diving Program One of the Best

By Jean Dixon
Sports Information Office

The first ten years Ron O'Brien spent coaching at Ohio State, he coached only men. He did not coach a woman diver on the collegiate level until Debbie Wilson came to Ohio State in 1973. Five years later, in O'Brien's last year of Buckeye coaching, the brilliant instructor not only has internationally top-rated male diver, Kent Vosler, but the depth of his diving talent includes Jenni Chandler, Carrie Irish and Barb Weinstein, a group O'Brien says are the "top three female divers in the country."

None of the talented foursome are new to O'Brien's instruction. All have been diving under his tutelage for three years or more prior to coming to Ohio State. They, like the majority of his top-level divers, were discovered at the summer diving camps O'Brien has sponsored for the past ten years.

Chandler, the first Olympic Gold medalist to attend Ohio State, has been working with O'Brien since she was 15, and comes to Columbus by way of Anniston, Alabama. "My whole town is smaller than campus," she said with a grin. Chandler will switch from her specialty, the three-meter board, to dive the "mildly scary" 10 meter tower in competition this year. She sees the change as a challenge and does not regard her gold medal win as an end to her improvement. "I have to work on being more consistent," she said, "Plus the switch to the tower gives me a whole new area to learn."

Irish, three-time national AAU champion, is a native of New Canaan, Connecticut. The skillful junior is anxious to get back into competition this year after having to sit out last year with a shoulder injury. She will be diving the tower as well as the one and three-meter boards and is practicing for a season of peak performance. "My shoulder works beautifully now!" she said.

Weinstein, a talented sophomore from Cincinnati, spent her weekends commuting to and from Columbus during her last two high school years to work out with O'Brien. Under his coaching brilliance, Weinstein captured the AAU national outdoor title in 1976, and bronze medal at the world student games.

Weinstein credits her success both to O'Brien and to the top divers on the Ohio State squad she dives with and competes against.

"Diving against Carrie and Jenni in practice is like diving against national competitors every day," she said, "It really keeps me on my toes!"

Vosler, the compact senior from Eaton, Ohio, rounds up the handful of Olympic diving talent. Vosler returned home this summer with a first place finish at the World University Games in Sofia, Bulgaria and is an Olympic bronze medal winner in 3 meter competition.

He admits finding it hard sometimes to keep himself "psyched" for all the collegiate level meets after having competed on the international level. "I go up and down a lot during the year, but I try and stay pretty sharp and keep working on improving," he said. "We're all working toward the national collegiate meet in late March."

Each of the four divers has the three essential qualities O'Brien lists as necessary for becoming top-level competitors. The first is a symmetrical, compact body build. "No knobby knees or sway backs!" he said. The second is a small build. Compactness is necessary, the coach said, in order to complete the number of twists and turns within a given space. O'Brien tries to estimate the mature size of his younger divers by looking at the parent's height and build. The third factor he sees imperative is a high level of intelligence. "Diving is a complicated sport and involves a great deal of memorizing and insight into each different technique," O'Brien said, "and that takes intelligence."

The Buckeye divers are a disciplined group and their practices are demanding. They go through two work-outs a day, practicing for two hours in the morning on the trampoline and porta-pit equipment, and again in the afternoon for two or three hours in the pool. It's a tough rigorous life, that demands complete dedication.

After a brilliant and successful fifteen years as Buckeye diving coach, O'Brien will end his college career this June, when he moves to Mission Viejo, California to head the AAU diving program.

He believes the diving program at Ohio State will continue to be one of the nation's best. "The program ought to stay at the top, where it is now," he said, "providing my successor is young, ambitious and continues to recruit successfully on the national level. Ohio State is steeped in diving excellence, it's the tradition here, like nowhere else in the country."

HEAD COACH WOODY HAYES

Woody Hayes and football have become synonymous during the past three decades. So, too, have Woody Hayes and winning.

Hayes, now in his 27th year at Ohio State, is the fourth winningest coach in college football history with 222 victories in 31 seasons. Only Alonzo Stagg, Pop Warner and Bear Bryant have more triumphs than the 64-year old Hayes, who spent three years at Denison and two at Miami (O.) before taking over the Buckeyes in 1951.

Entering the 1977 season, Hayes had won 189, lost 54 and tied 9 at OSU for a winning percentage of .768. In Big Ten play he owns a 139-34-7 record and has captured 12 conference championships. No other conference school comes close to either figure during the past quarter of a century.

Currently Hayes, who has coached longer in the Big Ten than anyone except Stagg (41 years at Chicago) and Bob Zuppke (29 years at Illinois), is working on a string of five consecutive conference titles and an unprecedented five straight bowl appearances by the Buckeyes. A Big Ten crown in 1977 would make Ohio State the first team in conference history to win six consecutive championships.

Overall, Hayes, a native of New Philadelphia, O., has taken nine OSU teams to bowl games and produced national championship squads in 1954, 1957 and 1968. His 1969 squad, which posted a 9-1 mark is generally regarded as one of the finest college football teams ever assembled.

Since Woody has coached at Ohio State, the Buckeye school has led the nation in average home game attendance for 21 of the last 26 years and finished second the other five seasons. At the end of 1976, Ohio State owned a string of 50 consecutive home sellouts.

Hayes has spent his entire coaching career within the state of Ohio. After graduating from Denison in 1935, he accepted a position as assistant football coach at Mingo Junction where he remained until being named head coach at New Philadelphia in 1938. He won 19, lost 10 and tied one at New Philly before joining the Navy in 1941.

Following his discharge, Hayes returned to Denison to embark upon a collegiate coaching career. In the time since, he has become one of the most respected and most successful coaches the profession has ever known.

Pharmacy

The Ohio State University College of Dentistry was originally organized as a department of the Ohio Medical University in 1890. Requirements for admission in those early years were two years of high school credits or the equivalent. The course of dental studies and clinical experience consisted of three academic years of six months each. There were two students in the first graduating class of 1894.

In 1906 the Ohio Medical University merged with the Starling Medical College to become the Starling-Ohio Medical College. The department of dentistry continued instruction in its original quarters on Park Street in Columbus.

In 1913, however, the Ohio Legislature granted to Ohio State the right to establish colleges of dentistry and medicine. On July 1, 1914, the dental department of Starling-Ohio Medical College became the College of Dentistry of The Ohio State University. There were 39 graduates in the class of 1914.

Although the state legislature authorized in 1922 the establishment of a Department of Dental Hygiene, it was not until 1944 that dental hygiene became an official part of the college's professional training program. In 1946, the first 17 dental hygienists were graduated. Today 82 students are enrolled in each of the two dental hygiene classes.

In 1925 the college moved from outdated quarters on Park Street to Hamilton Hall on the campus in the heart of the planned University Medical Center.

In 1951 the college moved into a new three-floor building on W. 12th Avenue. Additions to the dental complex were made in 1959 and again in 1966. Seven years after that, two new wings were completed and dedicated. And earlier this year, the college's building complex was renamed in honor of Wendell D. Postle, who came to the University as a dental student in 1918, became dean of the college in 1939, and retired in 1964 after nearly 50 distinguished years of involvement with the College of Dentistry and Ohio State.

During World War II, the College of Dentistry adopted a round-the-clock, accelerated three-academic-year schedule. At war's end, the college returned to its four year program. It was not until July, 1973, that the present 36-month, year-round program was instituted. The class graduating Sept. 19, 1975, was the first to graduate under the new plan.

Today 200 students enter the College of Dentistry freshman class each year. Even the most prophetic of the dental school's incorporators back in 1890 could not have foreseen the future growth of their creation, nor the scope of the college's achievements over its 87 year history, nor the constructive impact of The Ohio State University College of Dentistry on the profession it represents and the people it has come to serve across Ohio and the nation.

Dentistry

The college of Pharmacy attempts to foster in its students a spirit of community involvement. This spirit is nurtured throughout the four years of the undergraduate professional program. The future pharmacists are encouraged to work in any of several programs serving central Ohio residents.

Through the Drug Abuse Program, pharmacy students are sent into the Columbus elementary and secondary schools to encourage the younger students to develop mature attitudes about drugs. They avoid scare tactics and don't "preach." Rather, they provide accurate information about drugs, explain drug terms and inform their audiences how drugs affect the body.

Drug effects are demonstrated through experiments and through audiovisual materials. Pharmacy students last year developed a slide series showing differences in drug classifications, such as barbiturates and hallucinogenics, and they attempt to show the differences between safe and poisonous plants. Students in the schools respond positively to this approach. Approximately 50 school visits were made during the last academic year.

No less curious about drugs are the parents of these students. Pharmacy students were invited to speak to several parent-teacher groups last year. Parents, they report, are interested in drug interactions and in "pot" research. They also want to learn more about "street drugs."

Helping to shape tomorrow's professionals

Wendell D. Postle Hall on W. Twelfth Avenue, named for a former dean and alumnus of the college, was dedicated April 20 after years of being called simply "the Dentistry Building." The complex includes additions made to the original building in 1959, 1966, and 1973 to keep up with the growth of the college.

with students in other health science colleges in establishing several clinics. They participated in diabetes, hypertension and venereal disease clinics on the campus and at shopping centers in the central Ohio region. Visitors to the clinics volunteered for free tests. Students from Ohio State administered the tests and provided the participants with information about the diseases.

The spirit of service motivates some students to engage in research activities. Several undergraduates are working on studies researching drug development.

The college also feels a commitment to continuing education, which it meets through the Office of Pharmacy Extension Services, established in 1963. Employing a full-time director, the office plans and produces postgraduate seminars in cooperation with the faculty of the college. Professional pharmacists thus are kept abreast of the latest developments in drug therapy and changes in their field.

Optometry

There's much more to the education of an optometrist than merely learning to prescribe lenses that provide clear and comfortable vision, says the dean of the nation's top-ranked optometry school.

Dean Frederick W. Hebbard of Ohio State's College of Optometry says early symptoms of many body disorders show up in the eye and the optometrist often is the first to recognize them.

"The eye can reveal tell-tale signs of high blood pressure, arteriosclerosis and diabetes because it is the only place of the body where small veins and arteries are clearly visible," he said.

Dr. Hebbard estimates that a good eye examination, such as routinely given to about 40,000 patients a year visiting Ohio State's Optometry Clinic, usually takes about an hour.

An optometrist is interested primarily in prescribing for comfortable, efficient vision and recognizing physical disorders revealed in eye exams. The ophthalmologist differs in being primarily a physician trained in treatment of eye diseases.

Ohio State graduates about 60 optometrists a year. Most of Ohio's practicing optometrists were educated at the university's College of Optometry, Dr. Hebbard said.

Enrollment is limited by space for students to receive instruction and examine patients in an adequate patient care facility.

Dr. Hebbard says applicants to the college have the best undergraduate records of any optometry school in the nation. The college tied for first place with Indiana University's School of Optometry in an evaluation of the nation's 14 optometry schools two years ago.

Ohio State became in 1936 the first in the nation to develop a graduate program in physiological optics. Eight to 10 students receive graduate degrees in the field each year. Regents professor Glenn A. Fry, who has for 42 years contributed to the development of the program, has achieved international recognition for his research, Dr. Hebbard said.

The college is at the forefront in research and, says Dr. Hebbard, "probably has the world's leading department in corneal physiological research, which seeks to learn how the clear window in the front of the eye works."

Ohio State optometrists also were involved in the development of the first electronic tonometer, an instrument to measure pressure on the eye, 20 years ago. It is used to detect glaucoma, which results when increased eye pressure injures the back of the eye and decreases vision.

Meet the OSU Board of Trustees

John F. Havens

John F. Havens, former chairman of the Development Fund's Board of Directors, was appointed to The Ohio State University's nine-member Board of Trustees May 14, to serve through May 13, 1986.

A 1949 Ohio State graduate, Mr. Havens is chairman of the board of the Franklin Bank and director or trustee for several other Columbus organizations, including Buckeye International, W. W. Williams Co., Beverage Management, Inc., Midland Grocery Co. and Ohio Federal Savings and Loan Co.

Havens began his business career in 1950 as a real estate builder and broker. During his career, he has purchased and later sold, or been a member of investors groups for many financial institutions and land development corporations. Most recently, he was founder and principal partner of the investors group that purchased Big Bear Stores Co. in Columbus.

Mr. Havens has twice been the Columbus Junior Chamber of Commerce Outstanding Young Man and has been named one of the top ten leaders of the real estate industry by House and Home Magazine. He received the National Association of Real Estate Boards Outstanding Achievement Award in 1969 and the American Builders Council National Developer Award in 1970.

He currently is a director or trustee of the Mortgage Trust of America, San Francisco; Capitol Funding Corp., New York; Evans Adhesive Co., Sandersville, Ga.; Marietta College; and Centran Bank, Akron. He is chairman of the board of Muirfield Ltd., Dublin, Oh.

Mr. Havens is married and has four children.

OSU Wrestlers Look for Better Things to Come

Add several outstanding recruits to a group of five returning starters and you'll come up with the ingredients with which second year Buckeye wrestling coach Chris Ford hopes will brew success in 1977-78.

"I feel we had a very fine recruiting year overall," said Ford. "We recruited great depth in the lower weights to supplement our returning strength and this combination should start to pay off this season."

Ford's grapplers will once again face a formidable schedule which includes many of the nation's strongest wrestling schools. Besides perennial Big 10 powers like Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin, Ford has also lined up Oklahoma, Iowa State, Oregon State and Northern Iowa among others.

Nine lettermen are in the fold for the 1977-78 season and they, along with several outstanding newcomers, will be looking to reverse the 7-9-1 record the Buckeyes earned last season. Ford is also counting on an improved Big 10 finish this year after a disappointing eighth place finish in his first year.

"There's no question that we would like to improve our standing in the Big 10," Ford asserted. "I believe that our schedule will help us do that along with some better people wrestling for us this season."

Chris Ford

An analysis of the Buckeyes by weight:

118 — The leading candidate here appears to be 1972 Olympic Greco-Roman performer Wayne Holmes. He was just 3-4-1 a year ago, but should improve. Other candidates are Gary Gates, a former Ohio state AAA runner-up and Bob Shanklin.

126 — Vic Ritchey, who missed all of last year with a knee injury is back, and will probably hold down this spot. He was 8-6 two seasons ago. If he falters, Ford can look to either freshmen Kent Parrill or Jeff Won or sophomore Bruce Gilson.

134 — Another wide open class, but Ford has two gems in AAA state champion Kelvin Irby and AA state titlist Tim Palermini, who should wage a strong battle for the starting spot.

142 — Ford lost NCAA third place finisher Andy DiSabato, but recruited an outstanding replacement in freshman Phil Anglim, a former high school All-America with great potential. Looking to bump Anglim will be freshmen Dave Brinton and Phil DiSabato, brother of Andy.

150 — Co-captain Bruce Solomon is back for his senior year after rolling up a 14-5-2 record a year ago. Dennis Lyberger, who wrestled on a limited basis at this spot last winter, is also a possibility.

158 — Ford landed another top recruit at this weight in junior college transfer Phil Roblee, a 1977 NJCAA champion at Jamestown Community College.

167 — Jay Greiner returns after missing most of last season with a knee injury. If he falters, Ford can look to either freshman Brian Grim or classmate Jim Kalin.

177 — Sophomore Kent Bruggeman, who was impressive as a freshman, is the leading candidate, but senior Dave Charles and freshman John Schultz, last year's state AAA runner-up, will offer a stern challenge.

190 — Should be one of the strongest weight classes for the Bucks. Dave Mulvin, the team's heavyweight last season, has dropped down and the lighter weight should make him more effective. Jim Anderson, a soph, and Dave Johns, also figure in the plans as does Jeff Edelstein.

HVY: With Mulvin dropping to 190, Ford will look to freshman Luther Henson, a state AAA runner-up to fill the heavyweight gap. However, he will miss most of the early training because of football practice.

Analysis: It will be a young, inexperienced Buckeye squad, but one which should surprise a few people during the campaign. Coach Ford has a history of producing winners, and with his new recruits, he should have the Buckeye program back in a winning direction once again.

"Some Ohio State alumni are farther from the 50-yard line than others."

But all have that same intense pride in Alma Mater that marks Buckeyes everywhere. That's why The Ohio State University Alumni Association—the official alumni organization—has more than 80,000 dues-paying members—and why it is the largest by far of all dues-paying alumni organizations in the world! Buckeyes grow everywhere—and the Alumni Association serves Buckeyes everywhere. Whether they're at the game today—or cheering at some distant spot, Ohio State's organized alumni have one overriding purpose: to help our Ohio State University.

AARON BROWN

Aaron Brown, the Buckeyes superb middle guard, is one of 16 Ohio State seniors who are making their final home appearance in Ohio Stadium today. None will be missed more than the talented, hard working Brown, who has been a three-year starter for the Buckeyes.

Called the quickest middle guard in OSU history, Brown is annually up among the team leaders in tackles, even though he is double teamed on almost every play. "I know of no greater tribute to a player than to double team him on every play," said Buckeye coach Woody Hayes. "Obviously, other teams respect Aaron a great deal."

An all-Big Ten pick last year and a certain repeater this year, the former Warren Western Reserve star currently has 74 tackles on the year, including seven sacks.

He will be missed next year, because his kind of talent, consistent play and leadership ability are not easily replaced.

SEE WHAT'S NEW TODAY IN A CHEVROLET.

The Third Generation Monte Carlo. A new dimension in affordable luxury.

With immense pride, we present a trim and timely new edition of Chevrolet's personal luxury car: The Third Generation Monte Carlo.

Although thoroughly redesigned, today's Monte Carlo retains the unique personality of Monte Carlos past.

You see it dramatically reflected in the stately stance and sculptured sides.

The new interior is a virtual "Driver's Suite" —with sumptuous cloths and carpets, tall windows, an impressive new instrument panel, and special Monte Carlo "touches" throughout.

Available enhancements include a new roof with removable tinted-glass panels. The Third Generation Monte Carlo.

Drive it soon.

We think you'll be impressed.

COCA-COLA BOTTLING COMPANY OF OHIO, COLUMBUS, OHIO

You won't believe the sound.
You'll never believe the price.

Magnavox Modulars. They're packed with everything that goes into super stereo—except a high price tag. For example, the 1725 has:

- a solid-state stereo FM/AM tuner-amplifier to pull in those weak stations you'd like to listen to, and to keep them from drifting;

- a 3-speed automatic turntable with diamond stylus and smoked plastic dustcover;
- a built-in 8 track recorder/player;
- a pair of newly-designed 2-way tuned-vent speakers to give you rich, deep bass with astonishing efficiency;
- a price that's surprisingly low for such high performance.

Why not stop by your Magnavox dealer and tell him you'd like big sound at a small price. He'll know just what to show you.

Add leadership to your college schedule.

College military science courses are courses in leadership development. They offer you management experiences which will benefit you in any career, civilian or military.

You can take the first courses as a freshman or sophomore without obligation. Advanced courses, in your junior and senior years, lead you to a position of responsibility as an officer in the active Army or Reserves.

As an Army ROTC student, you'll also have the opportunity to compete for 3 and 2-year full tuition scholarships. And you'll earn nearly $2000 during your last 2 years of college.

Don't wait until after college to get practical management experience. Add leadership to your class schedule now.

ARMY ROTC. LEARN WHAT IT TAKES TO LEAD.

Buckeyes Prominent On Hoosier Squad

Outnumbered only by native Hoosiers on Indiana's football squad, Ohioans play a prominent role in Big Red football and today is a special sort of day for them, a homecoming, as it were, to the Mecca of Ohio football — the Ohio Stadium.

No less than eight are starting and the total would be greater were it not for injuries. Starting on offense are Charley Peal at tackle, Springfield, Mark Heidel at center from Cincinnati and Scott Arnett at quarterback, from Columbus. And if injury had not felled Mike Harkrader, the Middletown freshman who became the Big Ten's first freshman to run for 1,000 yards, he'd be virtually a certainty to open at tailback.

On defense it's Willie Wilson, Dayton, at one cornerback, and Dave Abrams, Troy, at the other; Tim McVay, Kettering, at strong safety; Russ Compton, Kettering, at middle guard, and Joe Norman, Millersburg, at a linebacker. Greg McIntosh, Middletown, was set to retain his defensive end assignment before losing the season to injury. And Dan Zarlingo, Lowellville, does all the Hoosier punting.

The regard in which they're held by teammates is easily discerned in voting for co-captains. The four: Peal, Arnett, Norman and McVay.

Outlook Bright for Lady Cagers

With six returning players from last year's varsity squad, and an exceptional freshman class, fortunes for the Ohio State women's basketball team appear bright for the 1977-78 season.

Under the tutelage of Debbie Wilson, the varsity posted a 21-7 record a year ago and won the Ohio state collegiate title for the fifth straight season and the Big 10 championship for the second straight year in succession.

Starting her sixth year at OSU, Wilson welcomes back a trio of senior starters from the 76-77 squad led by 6-2 senior captain June Brewer. A three-year letter winner, Brewer will be joined by forwards Martha Baker and Kathy Gordon.

Brewer led the Lady Buckeyes in scoring last winter with a 12.6 average and grabbed 7.8 rebounds per outing. Baker, a strong offensive player, averaged 12.0 points and 7.2 rebounds a game, while Gordon, a two-year starter, hit at a 9.7 clip.

Sophomores Kim Jordan and Cathy

June Brewer returns for her senior year with the Lady Buckeyes. Brewer led the Buckeyes in scoring and rebounding last year.

Kathy Gordon averaged 9.7 points a game last year and handed out 50 assists.

Bennett both played a good deal last winter and will once again be valuable contributors at forward and guard, respectively. An exceptional jumper, Jordan averaged 9.5 rebounds per game to lead the team in that department, and Bennett had 60 steals to pace the varsity in that category.

However, much of the optimism for the upcoming season is being generated by OSU's fine freshman class which is led by 6-4 center Cindy Noble. She led her school (Adena H.S.) to the Ohio state Class A title and is expected to be a fine offensive player. She earned high school All-America notice last year.

Frani Washington, who led her Woodward High School team to the Ohio AAA crown, is expected to contribute at forward as will Edith Thompson, a standout from Shaker Heights, O.

Debbie Williams brings a 30-point-per game scoring average from Niagara Falls, N.Y. to the Buckeye front-court and Ann Dooley, a guard, had a fine career at Cranford (N.J.) High School.

The Lady Buckeyes will once again face a tough schedule with the likes of Tennessee, a third place finisher in the AIAW championships a year ago. Immaculata, another national power, also appears on the slate as do North Carolina, Michigan State, Kentucky and Illinois State. In addition, the Lady Buckeyes will participate in tournaments at Mississippi University for Women in December and at Penn State in January. The former lists such schools as Tennessee, Stephen F. Austin, Tennessee Tech and Pitt, while the latter will include Penn State, Southern Connecticut and Texas (Austin).

Bands brighten up half times

John Philip Sousa would be proud. The "March King" died in 1932, but now, 4½ decades later, high-stepping, fancy-dressed marching bands are still playing his music to the enjoyment of gatherings up to 105,000 people.

The bands still play his "Washington Post March," "El Capitan" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever," but Sousa would be even more amazed to hear what groups of as many as 250 or 300 college men and women do with all styles of music—from Bach to rock.

Really, every Saturday afternoon is a tribute to Sousa as college bands brighten up half-time intermissions of football games from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon.

Directors like Dr. Jim Ferguson at Alabama and Professor George Cavender at the University of Michigan put their squads through paces every bit as rigorous and time-consuming as do Bear Bryant and Bo Schembechler, the football coaches at the same institutions.

Directors don't recruit

And they do it with whatever talent shows up. College directors don't go out and scout high schools for a fleet flute . . . or a swift Sousaphone . . . or a lonesome glockenspiel.

Nor are the bands overloaded with music majors as one might suspect.

Half of the members of Ken Bloomquist's band at Michigan State University, which is up to 300 persons this year, are music majors, but only 25 per cent of the 250-piece University of Michigan band are specialists.

At 'Bama, the band has grown to 276 musicians . . . "plus we have 20 majorettes and 16 flag carriers. It's the largest band in the South," Dr. Ferguson says proudly.

It is a point of pride in the student-run Stanford University band that music majors are a rarity. "We only had two last year . . . and that was the most in two years," manager Rich Johnson pointed out.

'Million Dollar Band'

Gimmicks are as vital for bands as they used to be for stripteasers.

The Alabama band is labeled "The Million Dollar Band," dating to a football game against Fordham back in the '30s.

Somebody—it may have been Grantland Rice—wrote that "The Alabama team didn't look good, but its band looked like a million dollars."

Fortunately for Crimson Tide fans, Bear Bryant has brought the football program up to the band's high standards.

Purdue's team has its ups and downs, but few complain about the quality of the Boilermakers' "Golden Girl" majorette; and, of course, Purdue also boasts the world's largest drum (although the Texas band would like to call for a measurement).

Michigan State zips onto the field in a kick-step—a quick stutter-step cadence which sets the Spartan band apart.

The Ohio State band, an all-brass organization, spells out "O-h-i-o" in script with the tuba player ceremoniously dotting the "i," normally without falling flat on his Sousaphone.

Stanford entertainers unique

Then there is the Stanford band, a renegade outfit that is a gimmick all in itself, albeit very entertaining.

The erstwhile fight song at Stanford is "Come Join the Band," so they did . . . some 170 fun-loving musicians who don't dress in uniforms, scramble rather than march and base their halftime themes on campus or war issues or political satire.

They don't even have a director, per se. Dr. Arthur Barnes leads them in the National Anthem, then lets them do their thing. What that is, is some usually controversial material led by the band manager, currently Rich Johnson, a junior chemistry major from Scottsdale, Arizona.

"We're a very loose organization called "SMUT" (Stanford Marching Unit Thinkers)," Johnson said. "We're just a collection of rowdies who collect over beer and hack out a show for the next week.

"We had 230 people audition last year. Musical ability is the criterion; but if he can't play, we make him a mugwump—he can play beer cans or whatever."

As you might suspect, reaction to their sometimes zany shows is mixed. They even changed, for all intents and purposes, the school song to "All Right Now," a top-40 tune of early '70 vintage.

"We had some bad press, but students like us since we've been in a couple of Rose Bowls," Johnson said. "We're accepted now and get alumni support. Oh, we still get letters saying we're disgusting or that we're 'the Communist influence in America,' but that type is less now."

No nonsense at Michigan

There is no such nonsense at Michigan, for example, where Cavender (a former Marine tank officer who saw action at Bougainville, Guam and Iwo Jima) looks for all the world like Meredith Willson's Professor Harold Hill cajoling the U-M band to impleore its "Victors."

"I learned a lot about esprit de corps in the Marines," Cavender says. "It's quite a motivating force in any group, and attitude is the most important thing in a band. That's the director's responsibility."

"There are no bad bands," Cavender theorizes, "only bad conductors."

At many major college games, the battle of bands at half time is an integral part of the day. Southern observers say the duel between Alabama and Tennessee bands is often as great as the game.

"Sure, we get 'up' for Michigan," says MSU's Bloomquist. "We have our archrivals. They correspond pretty much to those of the football team."

Michigan's Cavender said the pre-game feeling at Ann Arbor was hard to assess. "I don't know whether it's just the tension of the game I'm feeling . . . because I certainly get wound up for particular games, like Ohio State and Michigan State."

"I really haven't had to get these kids excited about a game for the last several years."

That could be because of the steady diet of victories at Ann Arbor in the Schembechler era and the crowds of up to 105,000 cheering the band's appearance from the tunnel.

As they play at Stanford, "Come Join the Band" . . . well, at least, come and listen—and enjoy. John Philip Sousa certainly would.

Biggest neutral site

Chicago's Soldier Field

On the south side of Chicago, braced by Lake Michigan's chill breezes and silhouetted against the skyline of The Loop, sits the biggest neutral football field in the nation.

Its name is Soldier Field, and you can count on the fingers of one hand the names of football superstars who have not made at least one appearance in the venerable lake-front stadium at some point of their careers.

For nearly a half-century, until economics forced its demise in 1976, the college all-star football game brought the greatest players in college football into Soldier Field to meet the professional champions.

Army and Navy battled to a 21-21 tie in 1926 at Soldier Field. Gene Tunney won a 10-round decision over Jack Dempsey in 1927 in the controversial "long count" fight under the Chicago stars. Notre Dame was a frequent visitor to Soldier Field in the '20s and '30s, although the Irish haven't returned since they were tied by Great Lakes, 13-13, in 1942.

Sixty years ago, Lake Michigan covered the spot where Soldier Field now stands and, to some detractors, it would be a blessing if a tidal wave sent the ancient arena tumbling to the depths. Since it was built in the 1920s as a memorial to World War I heroes, Soldier Field frequently has been criticized for poor sight lines, faulty illumination, and slipshod maintenance.

But the proud old structure still stands there, throwing open its rusty gates to high school, collegiate and professional athletes and entertainers.

Realistically, despite its faults, Soldier Field must be recognized as one of the greatest stadiums of all time because of its capacity to house great spectacles. The huge arena once accommodated 115,000 for a Chicago high school football game (between Austin and Leo) in 1937! The stadium has since been streamlined to eliminate undesirable seat locations, however; and the Chicago Bears, the present tenants, now play to a compact house of 55,000.

Included in the impressive list of events which dot Soldier Field's history are intercollegiate and Olympic track and field meets (including the 1959 Pan-American games), polo, rodeos, circuses, music festivals and pageants, religious and patriotic gatherings, thrill shows, road shows, international soccer games and auto races. President Franklin D. Roosevelt once addressed a Soldier Field rally in 1944, and the turnstiles were turned off after the first 100,000 boosters surged in. One estimate is that 250,000 partisans squeezed in for that event.

Knut Rockne, the late Notre Dame coach, once passed up an Irish game to come to Soldier Field and watch Army play Navy. On the same day in which the service academies tied, 21-21, in Chicago in 1926, Rockne's undefeated team traveled to Carnegie Tech with an assistant coach at the helm. Rockne learned by telegram in the fourth quarter that Notre Dame had lost, 19-0.

PACESETTER — Ohio State's outstanding distance runner Steve Crane led the Buckeyes to a second place finish at last week's Big Ten Cross Country Championships. A sophomore from Brisbane, Australia, Crane finished third individually, turning in a time of 24:30 in the 8,000 meter race. The winning time was 24:14. Two other OSU sophomores, Paul Roberts and Lyle Braund, finished in the top ten for Coach Jim McDonough. Roberts was sixth and Braund eighth.

Block O Celebrates 39th Birthday

This year is the 39th Anniversary of Block "O", the official card flashing and cheering section at the Ohio State University. Block "O" was founded in 1938 by Clancey Isaac, head of the O.S.U. cheer-leading squad.

The Block, which is located in the closed end of the stadium, has a membership of 1,500 students, ranking it among the largest card flashing and cheering sections in the country. Membership in Block "O" is open to any fulltime O.S.U. student.

This year's Executive Head is Doug Collier, President of Block "O". Directing the card flashing and cheering is Denise Dembinski, Vice President (Football).

The Block "O" members receive individual computer printed instructions by seat number. The instructions involve matching a stunt variable with a call variable to determine which color is to be used. Every instruction sheet has 40 possible card arrangements which each produce a picture or message. By calling out a stunt number and a call number, one of these colorful designs is produced.

When a card stunt is not being done, the word "OHIO", partially enclosed by a picture of the state of Ohio, is produced by red or white pullover capes worn by Block "O" members.

Block "O" is currently searching for information concerning our Alumni Officers, to aid in the planning of a 40th year Anniversary Reunion. Please contact: Block "O", Box 77, 1739 North High Street, Columbus, Ohio 43210.

At the end of this season, this team will be number one.

The Kodak All-America Team

It's one of the oldest and smallest teams in college football. It doesn't have a win-loss record. It doesn't set rushing records, and it has never scored a touchdown. Yet, at the end of the 1977 season, the Kodak All-America Team will be the number one team in college football.

What this team will have is the 22 very best players of the season. Twenty-two men who have earned the right to be called All-American. No amount of popularity or publicity can put a player on this team if he doesn't deserve to be there. It is a distinction which is earned with outstanding ability, sportsmanship and leadership. And these players have to prove themselves to the toughest coaches of all, the American Football Coaches Association.

The Kodak All-America Team is

The 1977 Kodak All-Americans
...watch for them.

KODAK SPORTS PROGRAM

the only team which represents the choice of the more than 2,000 college and university coaches who are the American Football Coaches Association. Their standards are exacting, for this is a team that for 88 years has included the greatest names in college football.

The 1977 Kodak All-America Team has yet to be selected. The field is large, for there are more than 12,000 players from which to choose. But when the season ends, a handful of men will have distinguished themselves, and earned the honor of being on the number one team in college football.

Teaching excellence — a Buckeye tradition

The University annually presents several $1,000 Alumni Awards for Distinguished Teaching, sponsored by the Alumni Association and the Development Fund, to recognize and give evidence of the importance placed on superior teaching at Ohio State and to provide encouragement and incentive for teaching achievement. A committee that included student, faculty and alumni members selected this year's eight winners based on nominations from those same groups. Two of Ohio State's 1977 Distinguished Teachers are profiled here.

William Berry

"You need to give a class good material and then get out of the way and let them go at it."

That's one way to foster class discussion, says William L. Berry, assistant professor of management science and winner of a 1977 Distinguished Teaching Award.

Dr. Berry stresses class participation. "I don't believe that students will learn to think in terms of real-life business problems by attending class and taking notes," he said. "Accordingly, I don't lecture, or at least I try not to. I get the students involved in a lively discussion, allowing them to bring out the important lessons in each day's case."

Dr. Berry, a faculty member since 1975, received his Ph.D. from Harvard Business School. He believes that learning administrative skills is more effective when structured as a participative experience.

"Most of their learning comes from their own contributions to discussion," he said. "Students learn more and retain more this way than in a straight lecture-type course. This kind of learning increases the student's self-awareness and, I feel, ability to approach and resolve complex unstructured problems of the sort they will encounter throughout their business careers."

"In a group discussion," he added, "the instructor plays a crucial role as listener. Most importantly, he must respect every student contribution and take it seriously. If he doesn't, discussion will dry up. The instructor must also try to anticipate different directions discussion might take, providing subtle guidance by interjecting questions and comments."

"Group discussion sharpens a student's thinking and verbal skills," he said. "I can tell a class is developing properly when they start to force each other to justify a position."

Helen Swank

Helen Swank keeps her classes moving fast and sends the students out feeling they have learned something that day.

"It's an important part of teaching motivation and it makes it exciting both for me and the students," she says.

Ms. Swank, an assistant professor who teaches music education and performance and heads the voice area in the School of Music, has won a 1977 Distinguished Teaching Award.

To be an exciting teacher, she says, requires a lot of energy, whether teaching a single student in her office or a class of 18 voice students.

"You have to be up, whether the kids are or not," she said. "The teacher has to pretend the weather isn't muggy and make the students feel it was worth their time to come."

"We are lucky in the School of Music. One of the things we have going for us is our smaller classes. With smaller classes, teachers get to know the students and their problems. That makes the difference."

Her classes include students ranging widely in ability, some specializing in a particular instrument, some including voice majors as well.

"They can be trombone or piano players, but the school maintains music educators need a wide experience that will enable them to help students in varied ways," Ms. Swank said. So, they all need to learn to sing.

"All will not wind up big stars; most will wind up teaching and enjoying it — just as teaching has been a real joy in my life" she said.

Ms. Swank's background for teaching voice includes an Ohio State master's degree, solo performances (as a mezzo soprano), directing the Westerville United Methodist Church choir and teaching elementary and junior high school vocal music.
